

Concerned about your friend

Talk: Ask the person are they ok, tell them what you have noticed that you are there, and you care.

Listen: It is important you listen to the person and what they are saying. Ask open questions, communicate back what they are saying, clarify what the key issues are.

Care: Sometimes someone may be going through a difficult time and it may be just that and nothing more and a simple conversation with a friend or loved one may make them feel better.

Connect: If you are concerned suggest the person sees their GP or connects with a local mental health service. If possible, ensure someone who cares for them goes to an appointment with them for support.
