Children & Mental Health

Understand the impact. Notice the pattern. Know what to do.

WHAT IS IT?

Children can experience worry, sadness, anger and other difficult feelings as they grow. Mental health can affect how they feel, think, behave and cope.

Concern grows when changes last, get worse or affect daily life, relationships, school or sport. A coach should notice and support—not diagnose.

5 WAYS MENTAL HEALTH CAN AFFECT A CHILD

01 Feelings & behaviour

A child may seem more worried, sad, irritable, angry, fearful or overwhelmed than usual.

02 Thinking & focus

Concentration, decisions, memory and following instructions may become harder.

03 Body & routine

Sleep, appetite, energy or physical complaints such as headaches and stomach aches may change.

04 Connection & enjoyment

They may withdraw, lose interest, avoid people or stop enjoying activities they usually like.

05 Confidence & safety

Low confidence, worthlessness, self-harm or thoughts of suicide need prompt support.

A coach notices and supports — a coach does not diagnose.

5 WAYS TO SUPPORT SOMEONE

01 Be a trusted adult who listens

Check in regularly, give the child time to speak and take their feelings seriously. Ask open questions such as: “How have things been for you?” Do not judge, interrogate or immediately try to fix everything. The PHA identifies coaches and youth leaders as important trusted adults

02 Create safety, belonging and inclusion

Make the club a place where children feel accepted, respected and safe to speak up or make mistakes. Use encouragement, predictable expectations and supportive relationships. Evidence identifies psychological safety, inclusion and trusted-adult support as central to children’s wellbeing.

03 Teach practical emotional skills

Help children name emotions, notice what affects them and practise healthy coping strategies such as problem-solving, calming breathing, asking for help and positive self-talk. Teach these skills through games and normal club activities—not only when something goes wrong.

04 Protect healthy routines and positive activity

Encourage enjoyable physical activity, sleep, balanced meals, friendships and time away from pressure. Keep children involved where possible, adjusting activities without unnecessarily excluding or singling them out. PHA recommends connection, activity and healthy daily routines to support wellbeing.

05 Notice changes and connect help early

Act when changes in mood, behaviour, sleep, attendance, friendships or enjoyment continue or interfere with daily life. Involve the child in decisions and connect them with a parent/carer, school, GP or appropriate service. Follow safeguarding procedures—never promise to keep information secret if someone may be unsafe.
